The Study of Law In the Nation's Capital

With traditions deeply rooted in the past, the Law is among the most venerable of the learned professions. It is the foundation of our modern free society with its emphasis on the value of the individual. Our democracy and our freedom owe their vigor to the continuity of government by Law.

As the Law plays a vital role in our society, so the successful study of Law plays a vital role in preparing the individual to take a significant place in private practice, government service, business, or education. The study of the Law is an exacting discipline, but the goals to be achieved are correspondingly rewarding.

Washington, the capital of the nation, offers the law student an unparalleled opportunity of observing the development of the Law. Here is the greatest legal laboratory in the world, affording first hand glimpses of the processes of the Law, from the determination of the smallest claim to the epoch-making decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. Here are housed the great administrative agencies of the federal government whose activities affect the daily lives of every citizen. Here is the Congress where all federal laws are made, and the Department of Justice, charged with the enforcement of those laws. Here, too, are the Library of Congress and the specialized libraries of government departments containing the greatest collection of legal research materials in the world. Here, in short, is an unequalled repository of Law.

Students at the Washington College of Law enjoy the unique opportunity of direct observation of the development and operation of the Law at all levels. Here is a matchless opportunity to prepare to represent future clients at the very center of the nation's legal life.

Graduates of the Washington College of Law have made a distinguished record in this respected and influential profession as practitioners, jurists, government attorneys, educators, executives, and legislators, and in private enterprise.

With the opening of its new John Sherman Myers Law Building on The American University Campus in September, 1964—completely modern in every respect and designed specifically for the study of Law—the students' opportunities are greatly enhanced.

The Washington College of Law is approaching its 70th consecutive year of legal education in the national capital.

History

The Washington College of Law was founded on February 1, 1896, and incorporated in the District of Columbia in 1898. Co-educational from the start, it offered women an equal opportunity for the study of Law. Its graduates, men and women, have contributed everywhere to the well-being of America for more than three generations.

From its inception, the Washington College of Law has stressed the advantages of instruction in Law in classes taught by faculty members who are not only sound scholars and masterful teachers, but who have had substantial experience in the practice of the Law. The Law School has maintained ideals and policies designed to prepare its graduates to become not only competent practitioners of the Law, both public and private, but valuable citizens of their communities.

The Washington College of Law became a professional division of The American University in 1949. Today it is an integral part of that vigorous and growing Protestant institution of higher learning and provides both full-time and part-time programs of study leading to the degree of Juris Doctor.

The Washington College of Law is fully accredited. It is a member of the Association of American Law Schools and approved by the American Bar Association. In addition, the Law School meets the requirements for preparation for the bar in all states and carries the certification of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia as well as the New York State Department of Education.

Facilities

The Washington College of Law occupies the John Sherman Myers Law Building on The American University Campus, at Massachusetts and Nebraska Avenues, Northwest. The building contains the administrative offices of the Law School, classrooms, the Law Library, and all other Law School facilities and activities. It is fully air conditioned.

The Library of the Washington College of Law is administered by the Law Librarian and staff under the supervision of the Dean and Faculty of the Law School. It contains approximately 43,000 volumes, including all United States statutes; the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States and the lower federal courts; numerous state reports; the National Reporter System; the standard English reports; the Codes of the District of Columbia and of the neighboring and more populous states; the leading encyclopedias, digests, compendia citators, reference books and services, annotated reports and more than one hundred law reviews. It is, of course, fully catalogued.

In addition to the Law Library, students enrolled in the Washington College of Law have access to any of the University libraries and have available the resources and library facilities of the Nation's Capital, including the Library of Congress and its impressive collection of legal authorities.

Objectives and Methods of Instruction

The programs of the Washington College of Law are designed to provide a thorough legal education and thus to prepare students for the practice of Law in any of the states, and to provide them with the professional foundations for a legal career. The Law School seeks to develop in each student a consciousness of the responsibility of the lawyer to society for the improvement of the Law and human welfare, whether in public or private pursuits. The Law School proceeds on the assumption that character and social consciousness are indispensable qualifications of a good lawyer.

To accomplish these objectives, the curriculum and the related student activities are designed to combine knowledge of legal principles with the ability to apply them. The Law Faculty presents courses in a manner planned to develop in the student:

- (1) an understanding of the underlying principles of Law;
- (2) the power of analysis to the end that he may exercise sound judgment and discrimination in the practical application of those principles;
- (3) an awareness of the relationship between jurisprudence and the social organization;
- (4) the use of legal research tools and techniques;
- (5) a sharpened and creative imagination so that legal principles may be adapted to new and ever-changing situations.

The Law School employs the "case method" of instruction as it has been developed in modern materials, supplemented by seminars, independent research projects, and moot court work at both trial and appellate level. Each course provides abundant opportunity for each student to exercise his own reasoning power in solving legal problems. Every student enjoys maximum opportunity to participate in classroom discussions and to develop close personal relations with the Law Faculty.

Admission Requirements

Undergraduate Degree: Applicants for admission must have received a four-year baccalaureate degree granted by an approved college or university.

Law School Admission Test: Each applicant prior to his expected entry into Law School must take the Law School Admission Test administered by the Educational Testing Service, Box 944, Princeton, New Jersey 08540, in cooperation with leading law schools throughout the country. The test is given four times a year at various locations throughout the United States and in a number of foreign countries. Arrangements to take the test must be made directly with the Educational Testing Service.

General Information: Beginning students may enter the Washington College of Law only at the beginning of the fall semester. Students with advanced standing or those who are taking courses for transfer credit to other law schools may enter in the fall or the spring semesters and in the summer session.

Each applicant must indicate whether he intends to study Law on a full-time or part-time basis. (A student who is enrolled for twelve or more hours a semester is a full-time student.)

An applicant is admitted to either the full-time or part-time program and must register and continue in the program to which he was admitted. He may transfer from one program to the other only with express permission of the Dean.

A full-time student may not engage in outside employment for more than twenty hours per week.

It is the responsibility of each student to determine the qualifications for taking the bar examination in a given state, including the sufficiency of his undergraduate college work, and to take the necessary steps to qualify for a particular bar examination. Some states, for example, require that an applicant register with the bar examiners prior to entering law school.

Each application and its supporting file will be evaluated to determine whether the applicant appears reasonably capable of pursuing successfully the study of Law. The Law School may require submission of additional data and information, may request an applicant to appear for a personal interview, or may take any other action it deems helpful in determining an applicant's qualifications for the study of the Law.

To allow adequate opportunity for the necessary evaluation, applications must be submitted as early as possible. Appropriate application forms are available upon request to the Law School.

In order to be considered for admission, each applicant must submit to the Director of Admissions, Washington College of Law, The American University, Washington, D. C. 20016, the following:

- (1) A formal application for admission to the Law School accompanied by the required non-refundable application fee.
- (2) An official transcript from each college or university attended (including professional schools) showing in detail the academic record of the applicant. (Transcripts will be accepted from no source other than the issuing institution and, when received, become the property of the Law School and a permanent part of the applicant's file.)
- (3) An official copy of the Law School Admission Test score(s).

Accepted beginning students are required, at the time of acceptance, to make a non-refundable deposit, currently $50, to be applied against tuition if they register and to be forfeited if they do not. If the deposit is not made as required, the acceptance is cancelled and the vacancy filled by another qualified applicant.

Advanced Standing

An applicant who has received his baccalaureate degree and has pursued a portion of his legal education in an approved law school may apply for advanced standing at the Washington College of Law provided that he is in good standing at the law school attended and unconditionally eligible to return to that law school. The applicant must submit an official transcript of such prior law school attendance as well as from all other colleges and universities attended. He must also submit all other data required for admission as indicated above. To be eligible for a degree, the applicant with transfer credits from another law school must complete a minimum of twenty-eight semester hours at the Washington College of Law with a "C" or better grade average.

Advanced standing is granted on a provisional basis. A student will be given full standing for his prior work provided he completes his first year of full-time study (or the equivalent in part-time study) at the Washington College of Law with a grade average of "C" or better.

An applicant who has attended another law school will be considered only if the applicant is in good standing at that law school and unconditionally eligible to return. There are no exceptions.

An advanced standing applicant may be admitted for the fall, spring or summer provided an appropriate program of study is available for him.

Unclassified Students

Degree candidates from other approved law schools may be admitted for the fall, spring or summer as unclassified students to earn credits for transfer to the applicant's law school. The applicant must be in good standing at his own law school and must secure the written approval of his dean.

Admission requirements include:

- (1) A formal application for admission accompanied by the required non-refundable application fee.
- (2) A letter from the dean of the applicant's law school to which the credits will be transferred stating:
 - a. the applicant is in good academic standing,
 - b. the specific courses approved for the applicant's study, and
 - c. the applicant will receive transfer credit for all courses in which he receives an acceptable grade

Unclassified students are not required to submit transcripts, Law School Admission Test scores, or recommendation letters.

Auditors

Members of the bar, graduates from approved law schools, and other qualified individuals may be admitted at the discretion of the Dean to enroll as auditors. Normally, an auditor is expected to prepare all assignments and to participate in classroom discussion, but he takes no examinations and receives no academic credit.

Combined Degree Program

Qualified undergraduate students who were actually in attendance in other divisions of The American University on or before April 15, 1964, are eligible to apply for the Combined Degree Program leading to an undergraduate degree and a law degree after the completion of six years of approved study on a full-time basis or the equivalent in part-time study. No applications for the Combined Degree Program will be considered after April 15, 1968. Combined Degree applicants will not be admitted into the Law School after the Fall Semester, 1968.

A student entering the Combined Degree Program must have completed, satisfactorily, a minimum of ninety-six semester hours of undergraduate work, the last thirty hours of which must have been taken at The American University, and have fulfilled all requirements of the University's School or College in which the undergraduate degree will be granted before he is eligible to enter the Washington College of Law.

Students interested in the Combined Degree Program should consult with a pre-legal adviser in order to make certain that all undergraduate requirements will be fulfilled. He should also consult with the Director of Admissions of the Law School concerning his eligibility under its admission requirements.

The Law Faculty believes that the Combined Degree Program should be undertaken only by exceptional individuals. It believes that in the vast majority of cases the student will be well advised to engage in law study only after he has received his undergraduate degree.

Accelerated Program—Summer Session

A summer session is offered each year which begins in early June and continues for a period of ten weeks. The summer session classes generally are held only in the evenings and are designed primarily for those students, both full-time and part-time, who wish to accelerate their Law School program.

In order to assure the student as wide a selection of elective courses as possible over a series of summer sessions, the summer curriculum is carefully selected by the Law Faculty with regard to the required and elective courses offered during the regular semesters.

Students who have completed no more than twenty-six hours may take up to six credit hours in a summer session. Students who have completed more than twenty-six hours may take up to seven credit hours.

Attendance at summer sessions makes it possible for part-time students to complete their studies in three calendar years rather than four. Similarly, full-time students find it possible to finish in two and one-half calendar years rather than three. Intelligent planning is essential to gain proper advantage from summer study, and students are urged to seek advice and counsel in regard to their summer programs.

Summer sessions are open to new students with advanced standing and to students in good standing at other accredited law schools for transfer credit. Beginning students are not admitted in the summer session.

Degree Requirements

The Washington College of Law offers full-time and part-time programs leading to the degree of Juris Doctor. The degree will be conferred upon all students who satisfactorily complete not less than eighty semester hours, including all courses as may be required, with a quality point index of 1.0 or better, and who have been in attendance for at least six residence semesters of study as defined below, and who are recommended for the degree by the Law Faculty.

Degree requirements are normally met in six semesters (three academic years) of full-time study or eight semesters (four academic years) of part-time study.

Full-time students are expected to devote substantially all of their time to law study and are required to carry not less than twelve, nor more than fourteen semester hours, except by special permission and upon payment of the regular fee for additional hours taken.

Part-time students are normally expected to register for ten semester hours. Students who are employed for more than twenty hours per week must enroll as part-time students.

Degree requirements must be met within not less than two and one-half nor more than six calendar years of study. The last two residence semesters, as defined below, which require a minimum of twenty-four semester hours, must be taken at the Washington College of Law.

A semester is defined as a period of instruction of fifteen weeks duration. A semester hour is defined as one hour of classwork per week for one semester. A residence semester is defined as one during which a student successfully completes twelve or more semester hours. A student enrolled in a schedule of less than twelve semester hours receives residence credit in the ratio that the hours, successfully completed, bear to twelve, provided that no more than six semester hours of residence credit may be earned in one summer session and no more than twelve semester hours of residence credit may be earned in one semester. A student who has taken substantially all of his law study at the Washington College of Law, and who has otherwise met graduation requirements, is deemed to have met all residence requirements.

A student enrolled in the Washington College of Law will be given no credit for work thereafter completed in any other educational institution or in any other division of The American University, nor may he engage in any such work, unless specific written permission has been obtained in advance. Permission will be granted only in exceptional cases.

Ordinarily, day classes meet between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m., and evening classes from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m., Monday through Friday; however, the majority of the evening classes meet from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday classes, conducted primarily for elective course credit, ordinarily meet between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m.

Financial Information

Tuition. Tuition charges for 1965-66 are as follows: Tuition for full-time students is $625 a semester for not more than 14 credit hours of course work. A full-time student who is permitted to register for more than 14 credit hours is charged for each additional credit hour at the part-time tuition rate. Tuition for part-time students in the fall and spring semesters and for all students in the summer session is $45 per credit hour. A $50 deposit against tuition, described above under "Admission Requirements," is required of all beginning students immediately after acceptance.

Additional Fees. Non-refundable fees paid by all students are as follows:

Application fee (paid once only on submission of application)	$15.00
General fee	10.00
General fee (summer session).....	3.00
Late registration fee	5.00
Change in registration not required by the University (added courses) ..	5.00
Late payment of financial obligations	10.00
Deferred or special examinations	5.00
Returned check fee (for personal checks not honored by bank)	3.00
Health fee (optional for part-time students) each semester	20.00
Student activities fee (optional) each semester	15.00
Official transcripts (after first, each)	1.00

The general fee assessed each semester includes a copy of The American University Law Review, membership in the Student Bar Association and in the American Law Student Association, a subscription to The Student Lawyer, and use of a locker, all without further cost.

Upon payment of the optional student activities fee of $15 a semester, a student is entitled to the use of the University athletic and social facilities, admission to University events, and a copy of the University yearbook.

Deferred Payments. Students who are registered for four or more credit hours of course work and whose total charges, after deducting any form of tuition assistance, exceed $150 may elect to use the Deferred Payment Plan. Under this arrangement the student pays one third of the tuition, fees and room and board charges at registration and the balance in two equal payments at the end of the sixth and twelfth week of classes.

The charge for this deferred payment plan is $10 if the amount deferred is $550 or more and $5 if the amount deferred is less than $550.

A student who elects to use the Deferred Payment Plan is responsible for making his payments in full at the Office of Student Accounts on or before the due dates. A student who does not make his payments on time will be assessed a $10 fee for each late payment. Repeated failures to make payments when they are due will result in denial of future deferred payment privileges and may result in severance of the student's relationship with the University.

Cancellations and Refunds. Cancellations will be allowed only after the execution of withdrawal forms provided for the purpose by the Law School Registrar. The amount of the refund will be calculated as of the date the forms are received and signed by the Office of Student Accounts. A student permitted to withdraw from classes during the fall and spring semesters is entitled to a cancellation of charges for tuition in accordance with the following schedule:

Complete withdrawal during the first week of classes all but $5.00

Withdrawal during the second week of the semester
(Fall and Spring only) 80%

Withdrawal during the third and fourth week of the semester
(Fall and Spring only) 60%

Withdrawal after the fourth week of the semester none

Students who discontinue class attendance but who do not officially withdraw during the cancellation period will be responsible for the full amount of the applicable tuition and fees.

A refund of 60% tuition will be made in the summer session if the forms are presented to the Office of Student Accounts during the second week of classes. No other refunds will be made during the summer session.

Charges Subject to Change. Charges listed are subject to change at the beginning of any session.

Payments by Veterans. Veteran students enrolled in accordance with public laws providing educational benefits are subject to all rules and regulations of the University and they must pay any charges incurred that are not paid by the Veterans Administration.

Academic Standards

The quality of each student's work is measured and graded as follows:

- A—Exceptional performance
- B—Superior performance
- C—Competent performance
- D—Marginal performance*
- F—Failure

Applicable in satisfaction of hourly requirements for the degree but earns no quality points.*

There is assigned to each grade letter a numerical qualitative value for each credit hour as follows:

A-3; B-2; C-1; D-0; F-0.

A student's academic achievement is measured by dividing the number of quality points earned by the number of credit hours of work undertaken.

A minimum of eighty credit hours with a cumulative quality point index of 1.0 is required for graduation. A student who fails to achieve and maintain a quality point index of 1.0 will be placed on probation and may be dismissed for scholastic deficiency.

The Law Faculty may dismiss a student who in its opinion is unqualified to pursue the study of Law regardless of his academic standing.

A student who has been dismissed for scholastic deficiency may, within ten days thereafter, file a written petition for reinstatement. The Law Faculty may reinstate such a student upon such terms and conditions as it sees fit. It is the policy of the Law Faculty not to reinstate any student dismissed for scholastic deficiency unless the student is able to furnish convincing proof that his failure was not due to lack of capacity to study Law but was the result of other causes which have been removed.

Examinations

Written examinations are held at the end of nearly every course. Final grades are based primarily on the written examinations, but in determining a grade the instructor may give such weight as he deems advisable to daily recitations and other assignments including term papers. The Law Faculty is convinced that preparation of all assigned material and attendance at all classes are essential to sound academic results. Unless all work thus lost is conscientiously and effectively made up, unsatisfactory results on examinations can be expected.

Failure to take the regularly scheduled examination can result in a failing grade. If good and sufficient reason is demonstrated to the Law Faculty, permission may be granted to take a special examination and a date for such will be set by the Registrar. Students taking a deferred or special examination must petition for permission to do so. Such examinations require payment of a special fee.

Whenever possible, a student unable to take an examination should notify the Registrar in advance of the examination.

Student Life and Activities

The American University Law Review. The American University Law Review is edited and published by the students of the Washington College of Law advised by a member of the Law Faculty. It consists of leading articles on legal topics, book reviews, comments on legislation and on recent court decisions of the State and Federal Courts, much of which is written by students. An invitation to join the Staff of the Law Review is a tribute to scholarship, and hence is one of the highest honors a student at the Washington College of Law can attain.

Each student receives a subscription to the Law Review without additional charge.

Student Bar Association. The Student Bar Association of the Washington College of Law is a member of the American Law Student Association, which, in turn, is sponsored by the American Bar Association. All students are members of the Student Bar and entitled to vote in the annual election of its officers and delegates. A Law Faculty member serves as Adviser. The Association sponsors many co-curricular and extracurricular activities designed to foster the moral, intellectual, and social development of the future lawyer and to provide an introduction to the type of activity carried on by local, state and national bar associations.

Each student also becomes a member of the American Law Student Association, sponsored by the American Bar Association, and receives a subscription to the valuable Law Student Journal, all without additional cost.

The Law Wives Club. The Washington College of Law endorses membership in the Law Wives Club. All wives of law students are eligible for membership. The club sponsors and supports many of the Law School's co-curricular activities.

Orientation Program. In conjunction with the Student Bar Association, the Washington College of Law conducts an Orientation Program for beginning students at the start of the academic year. This program is designed to acquaint students with basic information regarding the legal profession, the study of Law, and the Law School.

A Student Handbook, prepared by the Student Bar Association and the Washington College of Law, is issued to each beginning law student. It contains full information about the Student Bar Association, The American University Law Review, the professional fraternities, student life, the Placement Program, the Law School and campus facilities, and the rules of conduct for law students.

The Orientation Program is held on the morning of the first day of registration for the Fall Semester. Beginning students are required to report in accordance with instructions given them at the time they are admitted. A student's failure to report in accordance with these instructions may prevent his timely registration.

The Edwin A. Mooers Lectures. This is an annual lecture series founded in honor of Dr. Edwin A. Mooers, Sr., a member of the Law Faculty since 1918. Inaugurated in 1961 by the late Roscoe Pound, Dean Emeritus of Harvard Law School, these lectures are given each spring by a prominent scholar on a topic of contemporary interest.

Moot Court. At the Washington College of Law both Appellate Moot Court and Trial Practice Court are required parts of the curriculum. The system of moot court programs is designed to give students actual practice in legal research, in the preparation of briefs and in oral argument, as well as actual practice growing out of the trying of a case in practice court sessions before a member of the Law Faculty or members of the local bar or judiciary acting as judge and students in the University acting as jurors.

Oral Argument Competition. The Student Bar Association sponsors an Oral Argument Competition each year to enhance the opportunity of students to gain experience in advocacy and research. While participation in the Oral Argument Program is voluntary, all students are strongly encouraged to join. Appropriate trophies are awarded.

National Inter-Law School Moot Court Competition. Each year the Association of the Bar of the City of New York sponsors a moot court competition in which all the approved law schools of the country are invited to participate. A division of this competition is held in the District of Columbia among the teams of each of the law schools in the Nation's Capital, and the District winner participates in the final rounds in New York City. The Washington College of Law participates annually in this National Inter-Law School Competition. The team for this competition is selected on the basis of performance, scholastic standing and general fitness for the honor. To be selected is regarded as a distinct scholastic achievement.

Legal Aid. Qualified upper classmen who volunteer may be assigned to assist attorneys representing indigent defendants in the criminal courts of the District of Columbia. This program affords qualified students an excellent opportunity to gain first-hand experience in the conduct of a trial in the criminal courts.

Professional Fraternities. Five professional fraternities have established chapters at the Washington College of Law:

Phi Delta Delta (Beta Chapter established April 17, 1913). International Fraternity for women founded at the Law School of the University of Southern California in 1911.

Kappa Beta Pi (Epsilon Chapter established May 15, 1916). International Fraternity for women founded at the Chicago-Kent School of Law in 1908.

Sigma Nu Phi (Oliver Wendell Holmes Chapter established February 4, 1922). Founded in 1902.

Delta Theta Phi (John W. Davis Senate established August 29, 1940). Founded in 1900.

Phi Alpha Delta (Louis D. Brandeis Chapter established 1960). Founded in 1902.

Residence Accommodations

Limited space is available in the residence halls for full-time law students. The application for space in a residence hall should be addressed to the Assistant Dean, The American University, Washington College of Law, Washington, D. C. 20016, after official admission to the Law School has been received.

Lists of accommodations in private facilities are also available in the University Housing Office. This Office also maintains a listing of furnished apartments and houses suitable for married students and provides general assistance to all students in locating suitable accommodations.

Health Services, Dispensary. During the fall and spring semesters the University Dispensary provides ordinary medical care and advice for full-time law students. Part-time students may avail themselves of this service by paying the health fee of $20 a semester.

This Student Health Service is for diagnostic purposes and the care of minor illness only. More complex problems are referred to Sibley Memorial Hospital, located about a mile from the Campus. Those requiring in-patient care will be treated at Sibley, with charges made by the hospital and physician borne by the recipient. A group Plan of Student Health Insurance is provided to cover this cost.

All full-time students must submit a medical history form prior to their initial registration in the Law School.

Student Insurance Plan. A Student Accident and Sickness Insurance Plan is available for the full-time law student for a twelve month year. More detailed information about this plan may be obtained from the Student Health Service or from the University Admissions Office.

All full-time students are urged to avail themselves of this protection.

Placement Service

The University maintains a placement service to assist students in obtaining part-time employment to help them earn a portion of their expenses in a way that will not interfere with their academic schedule in the Law School. In addition, the Law School has established a program to assist students seeking part-time legal positions with government agencies or with private law firms. This program is designed primarily to help students locate part-time positions in areas that will implement their further development in the Law.

A placement service for graduates is also maintained by both the University Placement Office and the Law School.

Scholarships and Loans

The Dean's Scholarships. Anonymously established by friends of the Washington College of Law and The American University, these scholarships provide full or partial tuition assistance for full-time students. Programs of Study Programs of study leading to the degree of Juris Doctor are established for both full-time and part-time students.

The programs have been designed by the Law Faculty to provide carefully selected required and elective courses. The content and sequence of these courses are arranged to accomplish the educational objectives of the Law School and provide the student with the basic abilities and professional knowledge.

Since the Law must change and expand with the needs of the local and national community, a proper program of legal study must be flexible and adaptable to changing conditions. The Law Faculty is engaged continuously in a study of its programs. Changes, some small and others of basic significance, are constantly under consideration and are implemented from time to time as sound judgment dictates.

While it is possible, therefore, to set forth programs of study as they exist at any given time, the required courses, the electives, the course content, and the credit hours are subject to change as the Law Faculty may determine.

As the term implies, a "required" course is one which must be taken by each student, and taken during the semester indicated. Only under most compelling circumstances will consideration be given to varying the requirements. Students who attend summer sessions will depart of necessity from the normal programs, and they should make careful inquiry, in advance, of the effect attendance at the summer sessions will have on their individual programs.

Typical programs of full-time and part-time study are set forth below. The courses and credit hours indicated constitute the requirements for the academic year 1965-66. Course content is described under "Courses of Instruction."

Prior to the opening of each regular semester and each summer session, the Washington College of Law announces the courses it will offer in both the elective and required fields. Copies of these announcements are available on request to the Registrar.

While it is not possible for a student to specialize in his law study for the Juris Doctor degree, some concentration in selected areas is possible and may be desirable.

Insofar as it is administratively possible, electives will be offered so as to enable the student to have the widest opportunity for taking courses, both required and elective, in broad areas of concentration.

In giving consideration to an area of concentration, the student should consider that a lawyer should be a broadly educated person. The selection of courses from more than one area of concentration may be advisable rather than an attempt to take courses exclusively in one area.

It is suggested that each student become familiar with the subjects covered in any bar examination he may contemplate taking, as this knowledge may aid materially in planning his program, particularly in the matter of electives and area concentration.

The Deans and members of the Law Faculty are available for counseling and advice in connection with the individual's program of law study.
